

Journal-Keeping

Carry a notebook around with you and every time you see or hear something interesting, weird or funny, write it down. You can do this during a weekend or on a vacation. Animals always make for interesting reading, as do people.

Before long you will have lots of different things. Once you have 10 or 20, try joining all or some of them together into some sort of story.

It is ok if it isn't a perfect story; what matters is that you describe the incidents and create something that is interesting to read. Perhaps just join the things you wrote down together into a disjointed story about someone having a strange or wonderful or funny day.

To get started, you could divide your notebook into different pages like these:

- 1) Things people said
- 2) Things people did
- 3) Animals
- 4) Weird Things I Saw
- 5) Funny Things I Saw
- 6) Others
